Artist Statement

For this piece I observed randomness and patterns from everyday life, and tried to include multiple aspects of some of those patterns and randomness into one cohesive piece. I drew inspiration from the randomness of bike colors, to the placement of certain flowers and proximity to each other and replicated that in this piece. For the pattern, I drew inspiration from a gas dial and a stovetop. This is where the ringed circles originated from. I broke apart the pattern from the gas dial and used the pieces of line to scatter them throughout the work. I liked the idea of having them camouflage into the background- showing how pattern and randomness can coexist in life without being completely obvious. I liked the question, “is life random or planned?” and wanted to draw something inspired from that.
